GET HELP TO QUIT SMOKING

Bothwell offers smoking cessation class beginning Jan. 30

SEDALIA, MO – Smokers interested in kicking their habit can find the tools they need to be successful through Bothwell Regional Health Center’s “Freedom from Smoking” class.

The class, which follows American Lung Association curriculum, is an eight-session behavior modification program. The class will begin on Jan. 30, and meets weekly from 6 to 7 p.m. on Monday evenings for seven weeks in the Bothwell Education Center, 14th and Ingram. The class costs $45.

Quitting smoking is a process, not a single event. That’s why participants attend three sessions before “Quit Day.” For added support, the group meets twice during the week participants quit smoking.

“Anyone can quit smoking,” said Sarah Nail, Bothwell community outreach coordinator. “It’s staying quit that’s the hard part. This class is designed to give folks the support and strategies they need to stay smoke-free.”

“Freedom from Smoking” uses an addiction based model and behavior change principles. The U.S. Public Health Service cessation guidelines suggest that smokers who want to quit should use FDA-approved cessation medications in conjunction with individual or group counseling.
