Fairfax Named Director of Information Services

Bothwell Regional Health Center recently announced that Tom Fairfax has been named its new director of Information Systems.

An employee of Bothwell Regional Health Center since 1994, Fairfax has more than 15 years of experience in health-care systems management. He began his career at the health center as a night operator before moving to a systems analyst position and then systems administrator before becoming the Information Systems director.

"We are thrilled to be able to promote Tom from within the health center," said John Dawes, President and Chief Executive Officer. "He has proven experience and the ability to implement technology solutions that help us perform our day-to-day business of providing quality health care for our patients."

Fairfax received his Bachelor of Science in Information Technology from the University of Phoenix in 2007. Prior to that, he received an Associate's degree in Computer Information Systems from State Fair Community College.

"Technology used at Bothwell, whether it is lab instruments, sleep study equipment, critical care monitors or radiology equipment, does not function without some sort of computer interface," said Fairfax. "It is the job of the Information Systems department to ensure all of this computerization is running at peak efficiency to provide patients and their families with the best care possible."
